U. S. PUSHING FORWARD TOWARD RECOVERY

RECOVERY DRIVE HAS SUPPORT OF SALEM BUSINESS

Bureau Members Pledge To Aid Campaign In Friday Meeting

PLAN EXPLAINED BY NATION'S CHIEFS

Returning Blanks Continue to Pour Into Capitol; Plan Code Hearings

Merchants who are members of the Salem Business bureau at a special meeting Friday afternoon endorsed President Roosevelt's National Recovery act, pledging compliance with its provisions which aim to increase wages and give employment to more people.

This will be done, the merchants agreed, until codes of fair competition are drawn up by various trade and business organizations.

All who comply will be given N. R. A. badges and labels by Aug. 1. So far these supplies have not been received by Postmaster A. E. Beardmore, but they are expected by the first of the week.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 29. — The recovery administration served notice today that the President's voluntary re-employment agreement, now being signed by thousands of business men, is not to become a mere "share-the-work" movement with the wages of present workers divided among a greater number.

Explain Purpose

At the same time it made clear that not all more substantially paid employes may expect to get as much when their working time is cut. A reasonable readjustment is required, its general trend upward, but actual terms left to the employer unless it develops that the latter has a "peculiar sense of justice." Then, the administration will step in to see that the spirit of the agreement is lived up to.

These and other points are covered in new official interpretations of the agreement, made necessary by increasing numbers of questions from industrialists desirous of signing but uncertain whether the agreement might not require impossible payroll outlays.

Today, the stream of returning agreement blanks, signed by employers from coast to coast, continued. Definite figures as to the numbers were meager because many postmasters had failed to count the return envelopes.

Meanwhile, Hugh S. Johnson, director of the enterprise, was expected to set hearing dates for codes of fair competition covering two of the biggest industries of the nation—coal and automobiles.

The coal code signed by a majority of the industry was presented only yesterday. The automobile code was in Johnson's pocket when he spent the night at Cleveland on his way home after an airplane dash to Detroit.

OBSERVES 86th BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Sarah Fitzpatrick In Good Health Despite Advanced Age; Recalls Early Events Here

She's 86 Today

Mrs. Sarah Fitzpatrick, one of Salem's oldest residents is observing her 86th birthday anniversary today at her home, West Tenth st. No special celebration is planned for the event.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick, well known here, assigns no special reason for her long life, only the fact "that I have always tried to do what is right." She has good health for her advanced years, is unusually active and is keenly interested in present day affairs.

Active In W. R. C.

Perhaps her chief activity centers in the Women's Relief corps, Salem's oldest patriotic unit. She is the oldest member, from the standpoint of membership, has missed but one or two sessions in the last six years and, a few years ago, served in the office of president for a three-year term without missing a meeting.

She has been a member of the corps' quilting club for years and each week attends the club's quiltings. She is chaplain of the corps and a few years ago was state department chaplain. She attended the recent department encampment at Newark.

One of the oldest members of the Christian church, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, is a regular attendant of the church and the Umstead class of the Bible school. She is also a member of Home lodge No. 110, Daughters of Rebekah, and has filled all the chairs of the lodge, and is a member of Salem chapter No. 234, Order of the Eastern Stars.

Born Southeast of Salem

A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Baker, she was born on a farm southeast of Salem and spent her early life there.

Recalling Civil war days, Mrs. Fitzpatrick has a vivid recollection of the excitement in the community occasioned by Morgans raid, "when every man who could, mounted a horse and went to meet Morgan," she said. She remembers being at the Salem depot to see the local regiment of the "boys in blue" start off to war.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick and her family moved to Salem in 1876 and she has lived here ever since.

One of the interesting incidents that Mrs. Fitzpatrick spoke of in connection with the city's history is the lighting system. In the early days when artificial gas was used to light the town she stated that a boy toured the community on foot and lighted each lamp.

Styles Differ

Styles in women's clothing were greatly different when Mrs. Fitzpatrick came into the city to live. Then hoop skirts and bustles were all the "rage", in contrast to the slenderizing lines of today. There were no hats worn, but bonnets with ties under the chin were in vogue. Women were not prone to "makeup" their faces in those days and sunbonnets were worn as a protection against Old Sol's rays for it was not "fashionable" then to be sunburned.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick is twice a widow. Her first husband, B. F. Bolen, died some years ago. Her second husband, T. C. Fitzpatrick, has been dead for eight or nine years. Her only son, William Bolen, makes his home with his mother.

BARROW GANG'S CHIEF IS DEAD

Wounds Received In Two Gun Battles Fatal to Desperado

(By Associated Press)

PERRY, Ia., July 29—Marvin (Buck) Barrow, 31, alleged leader of the "Bloody Barrow" gang of Texas desperadoes, died in a hospital here early today of wounds suffered in two gun battles, one at Platte City, Mo., last week and the second at Dexter, Ia., Monday.

The cause of death was infection in a head wound. Barrow lapsed into a coma early Thursday and did not regain consciousness.

Police are seeking other members of the gang.

Surrounded in Dexfield park Monday, Barrow and four others attempted to shoot it out with a force of 20 officers. Barrow was wounded critically, his wife, Blanche, taken prisoner, and three others escaped.

They are Clyde Barrow, Marvin's brother, Clyde's wife, Bonnie, and an unidentified man.

Search for the trio was still continuing in Polk county last night as a posse investigated a tip that they were hiding in the woods near Woodward. The posse returned at dark without finding anything.

Bonnie Parker Barrow was first reported being treated for gunshot wounds in a Denver hospital yesterday but a checkup showed she was not to be found.

Mrs. Marvin Barrow faces trial at Platte City on charges of assault with intent to kill.

BOYS' CHOIRS OF TWO CITIES SING HERE ON SUNDAY

Salem, E. Liverpool Lads Combine Talents In Stadium Concert

GROUP IS DIRECTED BY ROBERT LIPPERT

In Charge of America's Largest Boys' Volunteer Chorus

Robert Lippert, organist and choirmaster of St. Stephen's Episcopal church at East Liverpool, for the last 20 months has been in charge there of the largest volunteer boy choir in America. He also is master of the choristers of the Church of Our Saviour in Salem.

Combine In Sunday Concert

These two choirs will combine for a concert from 7 to 8 p. m. Sunday at Reilly stadium. Lippert will direct the 125 voices, with Mrs. Marie Kennedy of Salem and Miss Gertrude Mason of East Liverpool as accompanists.

The program Sunday night will be the same the boys plan to present at the Chicago fair the following Sunday night. A committee headed by Wilbur J. Springer has been working all week to interest Salem people in the concert and accommodations for from three to five thousand have been made at Reilly stadium.

Choirmaster Lippert came to Ohio from Massachusetts, where he conducted the largest mixed choir in the state, more than 250 having been members of this choir. Lippert is a graduate of the Empire State School of Music at Utica, N. Y. He also was a student at Ithaca Conservatory of Music and has taken special work in public school music under the supervision of Dean Brown at the Conservatory.

Veteran Organist, Director

Lippert has had 25 years experience as organist and choir master. He has been professor of music at Hobart college, an Episcopal college for men at Geneva, N. Y., and musical director at William Smith college for young women, also at Geneva, N. Y.

He was organizer and director of the Carthage, N. Y., High School Symphony orchestra and has held several positions throughout New York and Massachusetts as chorus director and organizer of mixed and boys choirs, having as many as six different choirs in one week.

Lippert has devoted a great deal of time to the technique of boys choirs and is considered an authority on the peculiar quality of tone that is found in boy choir work. In addition to this work, he toured in piano and organ recitals. He now teaches piano, voice and organ in Salem and East Liverpool.

Beer Goes On Sale At Westerville But Business Is Rotten

(By Associated Press)

WESTERVILLE, July 29 — Beer was on sale today in Westerville, and though the one and only vender said business wasn't so good, the presence of the 3.2 brew provided a storm of protest.

It has been sixty years since anyone attempted to sell beer in this stronghold of the anti-saloon league.

"Apparently", said Charles V. Taylor, "everybody is scared to buy it. The anti-soloon league makes me sick." He was granted a permit to sell beer by the state liquor control commission, he said, on "the recommendation of some of the best men in town."

Ways and means to halt the sale were studied at a town meeting at which clergymen were in prominence. Plans were made for a local option election, on Nov. 4, and a mass meeting was called for Aug. 6 to prepare for it.

GENERAL JOHNSON OUTLINES NATION'S RECOVERY PROGRAM TO CLEVELANDERS

Flying to Cleveland from Detroit where he approved the code just adopted by the automobile industry, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, director of the National Recovery act, outlines the government's rehabilitation program to a huge throng gathered in the Public Square.

'Sock on the Nose' Promised Objectors in N. R. A. Drive

CLEVELAND, July 29—"A sock right on the nose", is what Gen. Hugh S. Johnson says objectors to the national industrial recovery act will get if "they won't go along with the code".

And the man President Roosevelt selected to create jobs for idle millions shoved his firm, square jaw out another notch as he said it in his appearance for an address at the public square here Friday.

General Johnson's eyes were bloodshot but they showed his satisfaction at a hard job well done.

"The plan is working.

"I went to Detroit to get the automobile code—and I got it," he told two audiences here.

"After all, it is the little employer, the one who hires from one to ten men, upon whom it bears the hardest.

"I've seen a little opposition in this respect. An editorial in a New York paper the other day asked what was going to become of the small stores.

"I say what I told them in a telegram—mine have died and worms have eaten them—but not from paying $12 a week for fourteen hours in a retail store.

"My message is simply this. The plan is working. The most essential thing for us to do is to get rid of the psychology of unemployment. Stop figuring that you'll have to save for a rainy day. Spend to end unemployment."

Wilbur Friends At Half-Way Meeting

A group of Wilbur Friends from Salem and vicinity attended the 12th annual Half-Way meeting of Friends Friday at Harlem Springs in Carroll county.

Henry W. Leeds, Barnesville, told of his visit to the Indian reservation, near Salamanca, N. Y., Mrs. William Satterthwaite, Salem, R. D., contributed an original poem and Albert J. Binns, Barnesville, gave an original oration.

Officers of the association for the ensuing year are: President, Walter B. Stratton, Winona; vice president and treasurer, Howard Bailey, Winona; secretary, Jessie A. Woolman, Salem.

Native of Canfield Tells of Visits Among Head Hunters of S. America

The traveler with a level head and plenty of common sense won't find a great deal of danger in a visit among head-hunters of South America, according to Carl Liddle, of 310 Riverside Drive, New York City, formerly of Canfield, and a brother of Mrs. Ruth Hine, 810 Jennings ave.

Liddle insists that the Amazonian head-hunters are very much like other people the world over and the traveler who is in sound health and properly equipped will find the savage country "as safe as the Maine woods in open season."

Has Interesting Life

Only 37 now, Liddle's life has been one of many interesting experiences, many of which he has narrated in a book, "Tunchi," now being prepared for publication in New York. He became interested in South America and its presumably wild natives while an ensign in the U. S. Navy then, after leaving the navy, made several visits to the country for exploration purposes.

"During the World war", Liddle states, "we discovered that even civilized people will fight and kill once they are stirred up even though they all prefer peace to bloodshed. The same is true of the head-hunters.

"For months and even years, sections of the jungles of eastern Ecuador will be as peaceful and quiet as a game of chess. Then something will happen; someone will start an argument. Bitter words will be exchanged and hatred will be developed. A certain section will be embroiled in a bitter intertribal feud and heads will be chopped off and reduced.

"Much Like Other People"

"The head-hunters are very much like other people the world over. There are good Indians, bad Indians; Indians who drink too much of the native fermented chicha, sober Indians, temperate Indians — in fact, all kinds of Indians."

PRESIDENT HOME FOR FIRST TIME

Roosevelt Back in Hyde Park; Happy Among Old Friends

(By Associated Press)

HYDE PARK, July 29.—Franklin D. Roosevelt came home today for the first time as President of the United States.

A broad smile spread as Mr. Roosevelt walked from his special train amidst a crowd of old friends and neighbors. His greeting with his mother at the station was drowned out by the cheers of the gathering.

"Hello, Sam", and "How are you, Ed" were heard from the President as he shook hands all around before departing by automobile from the depot to the family estate at Krum Elbow nearby.

With Mrs. Roosevelt at his side and his mother on the doorstep, the happy chief executive waited for a moment before entering his home to chat with local officials.

Away from a busy round of conferences at the capital where he has been directing the national recovery drive, Mr. Roosevelt decided to "put the lid on" for over the week end and no appointments were made before Monday.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 29—The American people began marching down a pioneer road this week, assured that it led to a happier land on the other side of the horizon.

In this land, their leaders said, five eight-hour days would be a full week's work for most people. Labor no longer would be a commodity subject only to the harsh laws of supply and demand. Children no longer would work at body-crippling tasks.

President Roosevelt sounded the cry for a whole nation of pioneers to try the new road in an address Tuesday night asking every American employer to sign a "blanket code" which fixes the wages and hours of laborers and "white collar" workers. Three days later the President had received 26,000 voluntary promises from employers large and small.

Appeals Go To Employers

This was only a beginning. Mailmen Friday carried an appeal to every man who employes two or more people, asking each to sign the pledge guaranteeing the agreed standard of hours and wages. The 5,000,000 employers receiving this appeal are asked to put the provision in effect by August 1, in order that the nation's payroll may be instantly increased.

The march toward recovery seemed to make progress in other directions, but it met some obstacles, too.

The grain exchanges resumed trading in futures under an agreement which limited each day's swing in wheat, rye or barley prices to five cents, up or down; four cents swing on corn and three on oats. The stock exchange saw prices generally higher after the previous week's hard bumps.

The oil industry agreed on wage and hour provisions and continued discussions of other phases of its code. The national automobile chamber of commerce agreed on a code for its industry which the Ford company is studying before giving its assent.

Some Strikes Occur

On the other hand, strikes occurred sporadically — a hosiery workers' strike in Pennsylvania, a movie craftsmen's strike in Hollywood, a lumber strike in Washington, a clothing strike in New York. Steel production showed a drop of McGee, convicted of kidnaping Mary McElroy of Kansas City, was 1 per cent, but good news helped balance the bad. Bank clearings for the week ending Wednesday were 58 per cent over 1932. Railroads reported earnings greatly exceeding those of last year.

While all eyes were on America's efforts, the world economic conference at London quietly packed up and went home, almost unnoticed. It did not set a date for reconvening, but left its steering committee permanently on the job.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 29—Everybody and every industry is getting new "codes," but this new code that the state of Missouri has adopted for kidnaping seems to be the most popular one adopted during this "code" era.

Well, the governors are down with us today, looking over the studios, and such. It's one conference that broke up in good humor, and an exchange of ideas no doubt helped each to assist 'em how to run their own state.

Mighty pleasant and fine bunch of fellows. Tried to sell 'em a lot, but there wasn't a sucker in the bunch. They getting out of the state just in time, 'cause Sister Aimee is coming in, and when she comes even Roosevelt has to take the back pages.

BUYING POWER

Two beliefs are implicit in all attempts being made to increase wages and spread employment. First, every family is entitled to enough earning power to maintain at least a substantence level. Second, as many families as possible must be given earning power above a subsistence level in order to leave a margin of added purchasing power.

Unfortunately, a subsistence level and a decent standard of living level cannot be defined in terms of dollars. Indeed, it is demonstrably impossible to arrive at an estimate, because living costs vary too markedly between one section of the country and another. When uncertain dollar values and varying standards of living among racial groups are added to the picture, the difficulty of making anything but an arbitrary estimate is plain.

During the depression many social agencies made estimates of the budget essential to maintain a family on relief rolls on a subsistence level. One for San Francisco set $20 for a man, wife and three children, aged up to 11 years. To maintain a family of five in New York City $25 was named as a minimum.

Various estimates for adequate family budgets necessary to keep up the purchasing power of the nation name higher figures. Significantly, none is less than $25 a week and none more than $30 a week. Even so, they are as much as 100 per cent more than the minimum wage levels being proposed in industrial codes.

Using figures obtained by the biennial census of manufactures in 1929, it appears that the average weekly wage was $25. Obviously this was too low to maintain buying power; when the average is analyzed many families are revealed to have been living on less than subsistence levels in the year of model prosperity.

It is inevitable that whatever reform is to be achieved in distribution of income through wages will be restricted to minimum proportions. Employers, as a general rule, will try to lure prosperity into returning with as little expense as possible. That is human nature, the same human nature which, in the past, ignored the fact that buying power cannot be maintained unless profits are distributed widely among buyers.

PARTICIPATION

In Washington, center of that extraordinary activity which is going forward under the banners of national recovery, there is reported to be an air reminiscent of the early mobilization measures during the World war. The same tense excitement prevails throughout the country. There is a feeling of momentous things happening and a lively expectation of great results to be seen before long.

Unlike previous phases of the new deal, the one in which the country exists now offers the thrill of direct participation. It was one thing to witness the remarkable actions of the 100-day congress. It is another to witness the actual results of some of the legislation enacted by that congress. When the blue eagle and the terse slogan of the N. R. A. posters begin to appear more frequently, the full extent of what is being done will be more obvious.

There is a striking contrast between the quick tempo of thought and action now and the aimless drift of thought and action a year ago. Then people were asking what could be done about the depression and why, if anything could be done, someone didn't step forward to lead the way. Now people are watching excitedly the things that are being done and giving their support to a leader who is willing to show the way.

It is to be expected that there will be a reaction to the excitement of the moment. Skeptics already are pointing out that hopes have been pinned too high, that they cannot possibly be reached and that the administration's popularity will wane when it is discovered that universal employment and decent standards of living for everyone are not attainable in so short a time. On that President Roosevelt will have to take his chance.

Significantly, he has not promised infallible cures. He has stressed repeatedly the experimental aspect of the steps he has authorized. Without obviously trying to leave a door open for retreat, he has gone on record with moderate outlines only. If hopes are pinned too high, it is the thrill of participation that has caused them to be placed there and not the immoderate claims of political leadership.

OUR READERS

SOCIAL EVOLUTION

Editor, The News:

The present organization of society seems to be in the process of breaking up. This may be seen from various points of view. So evident has it become, that only the blind will fail to observe it. Nothing remains stable or fixed. The people have become dissatisfied and restive. Forms of government are changing. Monarchies are becoming democracies; democracies, monarchies. Limited monarchies have become absolute, and republics, limited monarchies. The world is economically lost and is moving around in circles. The danger is that once that dawns upon the mind, a tangent course may be taken where anything may happen.

Government heads throughout the whole civilized world are deeply concerned with respect to the revolutionary trend of the day and are sweating blood in trying to keep the ship of state upon an even keel. The problem is too great for one nation alone and has called for an international conference for concerted action.

One would naturally suppose that the paramount question before the delegates of that conference would have to do with the production and distribution of wealth, because it goes without saying that the present system of production and distribution, which constitute the very foundation of a society, has ceased to function.

In looking for the cause for this, it will be discovered that the system of production has become developed far beyond that of distribution. In the past, all our social efforts have been exercised by way of inventing and discovering newer and better methods for the production of wealth. So busy have we been in this respect, that the means for distributing it has been neglected almost entirely.

The result of such neglect is that the world has begun to produce the necessities and luxuries of life so easily, so fast and in such great quantities that the volume of output is choking the customary avenues of trade. That is to say that with our improved methods of production we are producing an abundance for all but lack an up to date method for distributing it among the people.

Accordingly it would seem that the greatest concern of the delegates at these international conferences would be that of bringing the system of distribution up to date with that of production.

To attempt that, however, would be a delicate task; for it is doubtful whether it could be done without an infringement upon social or communist principles. Perhaps that is why the delegates concern themselves mainly with the question of production.

Surely this modern method of production should be left as it is. There is no need for any change in it. There can be no fault found with it. It has been developed by the best brains that the race has produced. It is the best that society has ever had and the very best that the twentieth century affords. That it fails to function in connection with the system of distribution, is no fault of the productive arm. The fault lies wholly with the antiquated member that is supposed to do the distributing.

By reason of this and regardless of what has been said in the foregoing relative to infringement on so-called radical principles, it is remarkable that there has been no effort made at these conferences for bringing the element of distribution up to date. Instead of trying to modernize it, we see the delegates endeavoring to make the new conform to the old. Rather than adopt a scheme for a more liberal distribution of that which is being produced, they enter into an agreement for curtailing the output. They agree to produce only a certain amount of coffee, of wheat, of cotton, etc., and accordingly we Americans are at present engaged in destroying our fields of cotton, paying wheat farmers for letting their acres lie idle and have gone to the extremity of preventing the use of machinery in the construction of public roads.

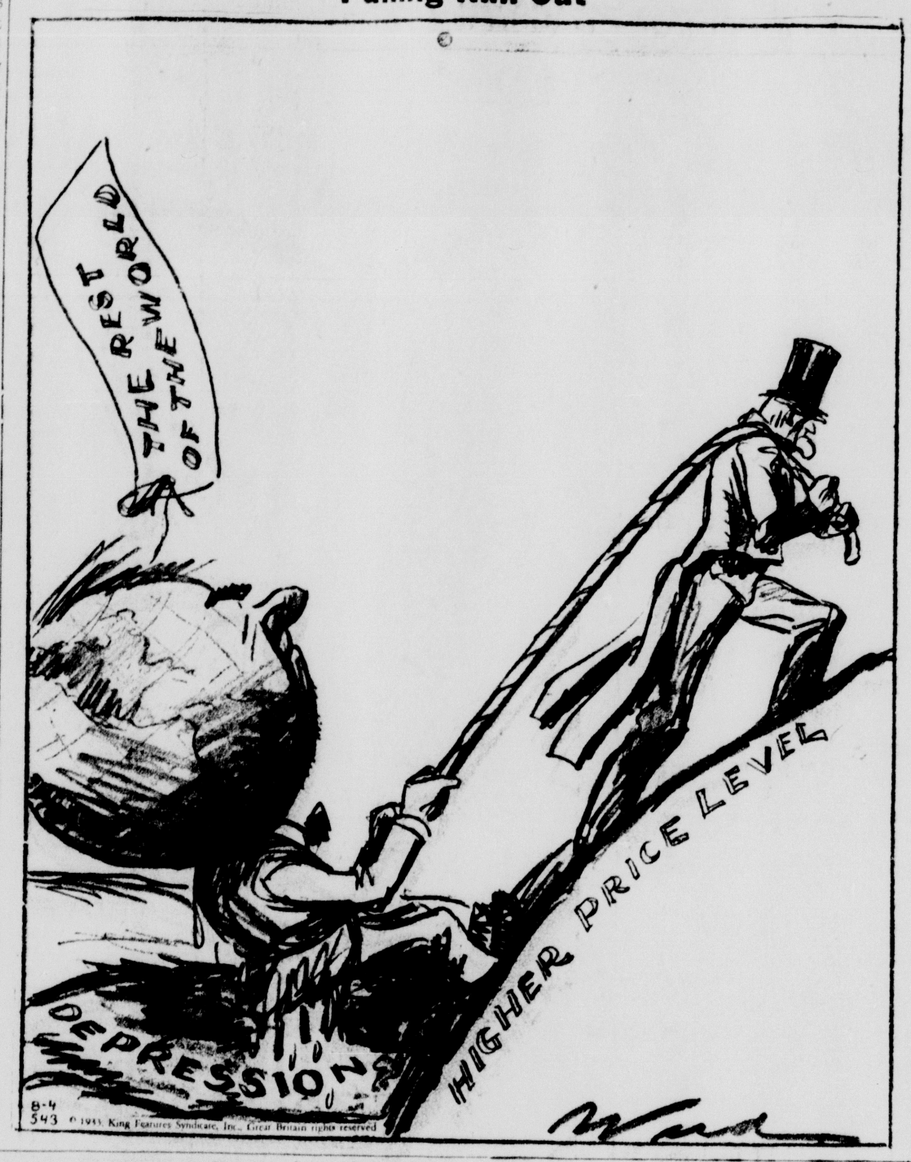

The world has been depending upon hand labor so long for the necessities of life that it has given rise to the belief that man lives to work rather than works to live. Jobs, jobs, that is we think of. The good things that the evolution of society is handing us gratis on a platter this twentieth century, we reject and destroy because they may be had without the intervention of work.

Never has any age supplied the world as liberally and plentifully as the twentieth century is supplying it at present. Had we a sane method for distributing the good things it is offering, we would be living in a veritable paradise.

One Needs Balanced Diet

Do you know that the name "halitosis" comes from the Latin word "halitus," meaning breath? Within recent years this has become a familiar word used in the daily vocabulary of everybody. As we understand it, it means an abnormal, malodorous state of the breath.

Dr. Copeland

No one will deny that halitosis is a dreaded affliction. Its prevention is far easier than its cure.

This disability can be traced to several disturbances of the mouth and intestinal tract. Many persons believe it is only caused by neglect of the teeth. This is not true.

Infected and neglected teeth and gums are frequent cause of bad breath, of course. But it can also be traced to diseased tonsils, infected nasal sinuses, and inflammation of any part of the digestive tract. Diseases of the mouth, tongue, esophagus or "food pipe," are causes that must not be overlooked.

An Unhealthy Condition

I need not tell you, of course, that under no circumstances is it advisable to neglect halitosis. It is an annoying and distressing affliction often overlooked by the victim. Bear in mind that it is not a disease. It is a symptom which results from an unhealthy condition. It is nature's sign of warning and should not be neglected.

Few people brush their teeth properly. Neglect of this simple duty allows food particles to accumulate between the teeth, in cavities of the teeth and beneath faulty and defective bridge work. Decomposition of this material gives rise to unpleasant odors.

Keep in mind that by simply brushing the teeth in any fashion and occasionally using a mouth gargle will not prevent this undesirable affliction. The teeth must be brushed up and down with a stiff bristle brush. This removes putrefactive food particles and undigested morsels of food that give off offensive odors.

Many a person has a rough tongue, capable of holding food particles. The heavy coating decomposes and causes an unpleasant odor. Gently scraping the tongue will overcome this.

Faulty Eating Habits

Frequently halitosis may be due to faulty eating habits, improper diet, indigestion or constipation. When halitosis persists in spite of proper care of the teeth and gums, a physical examination by a physician is recommended. If necessary, X-ray pictures of the stomach and intestines should be taken.

May I impress upon you the importance of a well balanced diet. Include plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables. Chew your food slowly and carefully. Never hurry through a meal. Meals should be eaten at a definite time each day. Drink from six to eight glasses of water a day. A daily elimination is imperative. If necessary, a daily enema or regular doses of mineral oil, should be taken.

As I have mentioned, halitosis is not a disease. It is merely a symptom or sign of some disturbance that requires attention. Do not neglect it.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, July 29—A fierce rain thudding down. Nothing more soothing than watching rain from a cosy window chair. Every home should have a sheltered balcony for shower gazing. A queasy day, but now midnight and big drops pelt and zig-zag the pane. Serenity. Rain, rain, rain!

About the only thing left that is simple is rain. Or perhaps dawn. I laid down a book to watch the rain. One George Buckley told me to read: "Little Man, What Now"? A drama of two defeated hopefuls in love written with a sparkle of Aesopian brevity. All my life I've tried to write briefly. And failed.

The most poignant line in literature encompassed two words: "Jesus Wept." And how marrowy terse the Sermon on the Mount and Lincoln's Gettysburg address. G. K. Chesterton sits down to every new novel declaring "I will be brief." Yet rarely is. It's an art few master. But about rain—

Willie Collier once appeared in a frolicsome tarantara "Caught in the Rain." The plot is vague but the title is a honey. Catchy. The success of Jeanne Eagles's play, "Rain," was half in its title and the constant downpour. An editor tells me poem ticking of rain always click with readers.

Of all phenomena rain has the most superbly ordered rhythm. No matter what one writes about it, however, the contrast is jerky. For instance! This ramble.

San Antonio, Texas, and San Diego, Cal., have the most salubrious climate the world over. I enjoy both and have frequently hymned their praise. Yet more fascinating than either is Havre, France, where it drizzles or pours 300 days of the year. The late Grant Clarke taught me to walk in the rain. It should be done slowly with pocketed hands and head bared. Often when a storm broke he would quit some night club and round the reservoir in this fashion and come back dripping with water—and sometimes lyrics. "Dirty Hands, Dirty Face" came to him on such a jaunt. His famous song.

Have you noticed at sea how sailors love rain? Even with protection near, they will stand sopping in a deluge. Afterward their scoured faces have a new light, fresh vigour. Victor Herbert loved the rain. Several times exposing himself to the torrents laid him low with pneumonia. Earl Carroll is a disciple of Old J. Pluvius. Henry L. Doherty, in the first penthouse in town, had a roller coaster bed that slid out to the touch of a push button to a tin roofed portico, where he could hear the patter on the roof.

I know a rain worshipper who gives credit to one of those sudden showers, that so thoroughly disorganizes New York, for 12 years of married bliss. A bachelor, he was eddied under Dutton's book store awning on Fifth avenue. He talked to a chance lady, walked her a few blocks when the sun came out. So they were married, have five beautiful children and a most contentful home. He lives next door.

Hugo Halling and I once spent part of a night in a Bowery flop house during a slashing rain. The suspicious aloofness of bums in a huddle seemed to melt with the rainfall. The low, fetid room was soon chirping like an insect obbligato on a summer night. One expanding gentleman with an arbored mustache proved himself authentically the father of a person of means. He was of life's miscellany, with no trade and a drifter, but not a boozer. I wrote his son of the encounter. He never spoke to me again. But when I see him I stare. And he reddens!

One remembers old friends in a rain. At breakfast Jerome Beatty mentioned Fred Schneller as an important politician in Cincinnati. A man by that name was extremely kind to me when I gawked out of the hedge to that Ohio city, a garmouthed country boy with cockle burrs in my hair. I never saw him again, but I learn he is the same Fred Schneller. So, inspired by the rain, I am going to write him of appreciation I was then too shy to express. Most of us should be more gracious to the stranger in town. In those formative, bewildering days, a cheery word means much.

The rain has stopped. Across the way a slinking cat comes to the curb and puts a shine on its morning face. There's a juniper tang in the dawn air. One of those refreshing days when incompetents dream of starting The Great American Novel.

Persons who want anything know that The News is the Want Medium in this vicinity. So read it.

What Others Say

THE KIDNAPING CHALLENGE

Kidnaping continues unabated. It has already assumed the proportions of a national menace and is bound to get worse as more of the gangsters exhaust the revenues they have in the past been able to collect from the illicit beer traffic. The consummation of repeal, expected within the next six months is certain to drive still larger numbers of racketeers into the kidnaping game.

The question is what to do about it. The federal government, of course, is the answer, and the administration in Washington is known to be fully awake to the challenge. Attorney General Cummings has named Joseph B. Keenan, Cleveland, as a special assistant devoting all his time to the combating of organized crime, and Keenan is endeavoring to formulate a concerted, nation-wide attack upon kidnaping rings in particular.

The problem is difficult, intricate and monumental, and all the more so in democracy. Kidnapers strike when least expected. In every instance there is immediately a conflict over the question of duty. Which is more important, the apprehension of the abductors or the safe return of the victim? From the standpoint of justice and society, the one is, but what officers have the heart to interfere with the secret plans of families to bring back their loved ones? The Lindbergh tragedy is a striking example of the result of police intervention.

In any event, the solution lies not so much in the capture of the perpetrators of a crime as in the breaking up of the kidnaping gangs. This will require a secret service of an efficiency and a magnitude never before known. It is a sad situation to contemplate but the United States will have to come to it, and soon, if law and order and peace and safety are to be maintained.—Ohio State Journal.

THE LOVE STORY OF MARY AND DOUG

ARTICLE IV
By ALANSON EDWARDS
United Press Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, July 28—Screenland found only mild surprise in Mary Pickford's disclosure of a separation from Douglas Fairbanks, her partner in the "perfect romance" that endured for 13 years.

Since 1930 it had been an open secret here that all was not well at Pickfair, the $400,000 honeymoon house where Doug and Mary spent so many happy years. Only their brave "front" and constant denials prevented the break long before.

The blind devotion that marked their love match for a decade may have had something to do with the estrangement. Certainly, they did not lack warnings from well meaning friends.

"This sort of thing is a mistake," they told Mary. "There is bound to be a reaction."

Mary always had the same reaction:

"Our lives are too short as it is. We are not going to lose a single day being together."

Love even so strong as this cannot surmount every obstacle. For one thing, there's temperament.

Doug Is Bundle of Nerves

Doug is a bundle of nerves and energy. Somewhat under medium height, he is able at 50 to outdistance larger and younger men. He is restless and "on the go" constantly. If there are no pictures to be made, Hollywood bores him.

Mary's temperament either has her touching the clouds or in the depths of despondency. There's no middle ground for "America's Sweetheart". Too, she loves Hollywood. Movies are her life.

And there's money. On most matters, Doug and Mary agreed. When John Fairbanks died and Doug assumed his picture company's finances, he and Mary established trust funds to assure a comfortable living should a film venture fail.

There was, however, this difference: Money neither affected nor impressed Mary. Doug believed money was made to use, and wanted to do the things a big income permits—travel and all that. He wasn't niggardly. He still is reputed to have the film colony's largest private payroll of relatives and friends.

Mary has a mind of her own no less than Doug. The world saw an example of Pickford determination in 1928 when she bobbed the famous golden curls for her role in "Coquette". Mary still gets fan letters both for and against the change. At the time, her mail was delivered in truckloads.

The latest Pickford surprise, her announcement of a separation and possible divorce, was a sad one for "the only Mary". But she saw the inevitable and cut the Gordian knot in typical Pickford fashion.

Their friends believe now that Doug's solo trip to Europe in 1930, the first he had made without her, was the beginning of the end. There were elaborate explanations at the time, of course, as to just why Mary couldn't go along.

Makes Other Trips

Doug made other trips after that—to the South Seas, to Africa, to China, to India. Mary smiled, and stayed at home.

Occasionally the flying Fairbanks paid brief visits to Pickfair. The first time he let it be known he didn't plan any more "gigantic" pictures. Another time he confided a greater fondness for Europe than for Hollywood.

All the while Doug and Mary continued to protest their devotion. Often Mary traveled to New York to meet Doug as he returned from abroad. Only a month ago Doug rushed dramatically by plane to Albuquerque, N. M., to overtake Mary's train and publicly embrace her.

When a fateful cable arrived a few days ago, Mary left the time for maintaining appearances was ended. In the cable Doug told her she must maintain Pickfair hereafter at her own expense. It developed he had wanted to close Pickfair some time ago.

And thus "the little lady of a hundred successes" admitted sadly, wistfully, that her greatest bid for happiness was a failure.

" If there is a divorce, the grounds will be incompatibility."

Incompatibility! The two love birds who ate together every night for six years couldn't get along. The partners in Hollywood's biggest business and social success now were the best of enemies. The greatest romance in Hollywood's history ended like most other Hollywood marriages—on the shoals of discord.

Mary waits now in Pickfair for a real estate agent to tell her the dream house is sold. Doug is in Europe with his friends.

TRAVELER TELLS OF HEADHUNTERS

tective devices of civilization, according to Liddle, are really danger, in odd sizes, and have little to do with the relative savagery or tameness of the native inhabitants. To get the toothache 30 days from civilization, he explains, is bad enough, but to become desperately sick and not know what the matter is doubly serious.

Jungle Ills Real Dangers

These jungle ailments and mosquito bites, sand-fly stings, scratches from thorns, perils of the grotesque native food—these far surpass as dangers the difficulties with black jaguars, big snakes and lance-throwing savages.

Mrs. Hine has been residing in Salem for the last year and is employed as bookkeeper by the Grate Motor company. She is in constant communication with her explorer-brother whom, however, she hasn't seen for several years.

Liddle hasn't been in Canfield, his native home for seven or eight years. He has been interested in jungle explorations for some years, his sister relates, and has written many magazines articles and stories for newspapers. His book, "Tunchi," expected off the presses soon, is his first venture into narrations of book length.

"I am happy to state that Mt. Union college viewed as an industrial plant, ran 95 percent production last year. We had 497 students in attendance and graduated 100 splendid seniors."

Services In Our Churches

HOLY TRINITY LUTHERAN

East State st, at Woodland ave., Rev. George D. Keister, pastor.

Seventh Sunday after Trinity.

Sunday school 9:45, (Judges 7:4-1). Paul Wilms, Supt.

"God's servants are handpicked men and women. The eye of the world might differ about some of the choices, but time substantiates the infinite wisdom of the eternal God. The requirements of the Divine mind may not be a long worthy line of ancestors, it may disregard earthly royalty, it may not follow the plan of succession of father to son, but finally the choices of God reveal His perfect judgment. For every mighty task, there is a worker or leader some where to do the work.

"The crises in Israel proved that God had someone upon whom He could call to work deliverance for His people. Faith in God and an unlimited desire to obey were to be found in these leaders. Gideon was a winner, because the might of mind and arm, were bolstered up with the wisdom and strength of the Lord. God won that battle."

Morning worship, 11—Sermon: "A Futile Question."

"Every question has some kind of an answer. The fool's question may have a fool's answer. Some questions point to self-evident answers. On an occasion in the life of Jesus, the feeding of the multitude in the desert place had only one human solution. Impossibility was the only answer for the human mind. The presentation of this miracle reveals that impossible questions from the viewpoint of man, are possible from the side of God.

"When man says, 'It cannot be done', God may proceed to accomplish the work. The disciples on one occasion saw no possible way to provide food for the hungering thusands. There was no way out. Jesus saw the way. He provided that the hungry multitude received plenty of food. The limited knowledge of man, should inspire greater faith in God."

The Golden Text is: Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted." (Isaiah 49:13).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." (Matthew 5:38-39).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus' life proved divinely and scientifically, that God is Love, whereas priest and rabbi affirmed God to be a mighty potentate who loves and hates. The Jewish theology gave no hint of the unchanging love of God." (p. 42).

"PREMIERE"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

COPYRIGHT—1932 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Leni Luneska, beautiful motion picture star, is embarrassed at the premiere of her latest picture when her husband, Kall Kruger, whom she thought in prison, arrives and threatens to reveal his identity unless she talks with him. Lucky Cavanaugh, a gambler, prevents Kruger from making a scene office to await Leni after the and has him placed in a private show. In the next office, thieves are burglarizing the safe. Leni goes to Kruger. He demands recognition as her husband. She refuses but he says he will wait for her to reconsider. Cavanaugh, fascinated by Leni's beauty, follows her into the box. Finding her in tears he tries to comfort her and Leni is strangely strengthened by his hand-clasp. He takes her out for some air. Forced to confide in someone, she relates her past life; slaving in a Vienna factory . . . marriage to Kruger when only 14 . . . beatings . . . . Kruger's arrest . . . America . . . and her romantic rise to stardom. Unable to resist, Cavanaugh takes Leni in his arms and, in an unguarded moment, she allows him to kiss her. Suddenly regaining her composure, she asks him to take her back and forget about it. Cavanaugh goes to Kruger and insists that he leave, but the latter is defiant. A fight ensues and Kruger draws a revolver. Cavanaugh turns out the lights, Kruger empties his gun at Lucky but misses him. Then, in fury, Kruger rushes through the door leading to the next office, surprising the robbers at work. A tongue of flame spurts from a burglar's automatic and Kruger drops—dead.

CHAPTER TEN

The man with the flashlight shut it off as Kruger struck the floor It would have been ridiculously easy to fire another shot into the lighted room where Cavanaugh stood stark still — a target that One of them closed the door, leaving the dark. In fact, had begun to level his revolver when one of his companions knocked it aside.

"Don't be a fool!" said one of the men hoarsely.

For men in their positions it was bad technique to commit another murder. Their sole object now was to escape as adroitly as possible. One of them closed the door, leaving Cavanaugh standing alone in the office where a moment before the living Kruger had faced him.

"I'll have to get out of here at once," Cavanaugh said silently to himself, "or I'll be arrested."

In a dazed way he was aware of what had happened. Kruger had burst in upon the scene of crime and his life had paid the penalty. Cavanaugh looked about him. A glittering something on the floor attracted his eye. It was the cheap revolver dropped by Kruger.

There was no belief in his mind that Kruger was merely wounded—alive and still a menace. The single bullet had spoken with the voice of death. Cavanaugh felt this inwardly, knew it to be true beyond peradventure. The word Death rang through his mind like the tolling of a bell. Karl Kruger had gone and taken his sorry tale with him.

Without hurrying Cavanaugh let himself into the outer corridor and closed the door behind him.—There in the back part of the theater he could hear dimly the mechanical clangue of the characters on the screen. The throb of his pulse in his wrist was quite distinct. His heart had a heavy beating that was almost a jar.

The remarkable thing was that he had escaped both Kruger's bullets and any implication in the murder. It remained only for him to walk casually back to the box and sit down behind Leni Luneska. He needed no alibi.

If anyone, by chance, should inquire—he had merely been in the forecourt smoking a cigarette. After all, he had had practically nothing to do with Kruger's death. Poor devil!

For an instant Cavanaugh felt a wave of pity for the man but immediately it was engulfed in a great feeling of relief for Leni's sake. For her the black beast of fear had been killed. It was a good thing, Cavanaugh decided deliberately, that Kruger was dead. By any process of human reasoning, the man had forfeited all right to live.

At the bend of the corridor Cavanaugh set foot on the first step leading downward when he almost bumped into a stocky figure ascending.

Thus it came about that Tom Mulrooney encountered — and remembered—the presence of Lucky Cavanaugh in a part of the theater where Cavanaugh had no business to be.

This was important because Mulrooney was head of the city's detective force. A short, wide-shouldered man with a stubby red moustache and eyes as blue and clear as a child's Cavanaugh, on his way to Leni Luneska, would have passed the detective with a nonchalant salutation but Mulrooney, for no apparent reason, insisted upon stopping and shaking hands.

"Well, well, Lucky—it's good to see you again," Mulrooney said. "How did they treat you at Caliente?"

"They got everything but my toothbrush, as usual," grinned Cavanaugh

"That's a smart story and I don't blame you for sticking to it," responded Mulrooney. "You let the mob around this town know you've got any money and they'll bite you to death. How did you like the picture tonight"

"I'm willing to forgive and forget it."

"Didn't I see you in the box with Leni Luneska?"

"Yes—that's right."

"Friend of yours?"

Cavanaugh waited a moment before answering. He thrust his hands into his trouser pockets and stood, tall and athletic, with a small quizzical scowl forming between his brows.

"Certainly she's a friend of mine," he said with a shadow of irritation. "What's the idea anyway, Mulrooney?"

"No idea at all, Lucky," replied Mulrooney easily. "I was just wondering—didn't I see you leave the box with Miss Luneska about half an hour ago?"

"I don't know whether you saw it or not," said Cavanaugh, "but that's what happened. We stepped outside for a little fresh air."

Mulrooney nodded. "Sure. The reason I asked you—I wondered if you noticed any suspicious looking characters while you were outside?"

"How does a suspicious looking character look?" asked Cavanaugh smiling, his hands still in his pockets.

"I'm not kidding," said the other. "I was talking to Kaufmann and somebody has broken into his penthouse. He was up there a few minutes ago and he said the window had been jimmied."

"Was anything stolen?"

"That's the funny part," said Mulrooney thoughtfully. "It looks like somebody went up there and made himself at home for a little while. Kaufman is kinda upset about it. A man don't like to have his private quarters entered. Not when there are marks on the window that show a professional jimmy had been used. It's a little bit unpleasant."

Cavanaugh assumed a thoughtful expression.

"Tell you what I'll do Mulrooney. I'll think it over and if I can solve the mystery for you I'll do it. Of course I'm not a professional detective like you are——"

"Oh, don't bother too much about it," said Mulrooney, with half a smile under his bristling moustache. "Maybe it wasn't anything serious at all. Probably some couple slipped out of the audience and went up there to spend a little time together—who knows? Myself, I don't take things like that too seriously."

Cavanaugh shifted on his feet, preparing to go on downstairs. It gave him an obscure sense of discomfort to be standing talking to this detective while Karl Kruger's dead body lay not more than fifty feet distant.

"Going back to the box?" asked Mulrooney..

"In a general way—yes."

Mulrooney fetched a filmy whisp of chiffon from the side pocket of his coat.

"I just found this ladies' handkerchief up in Kaufmann's penthouse," he said. "It's scented up with an awfully nice perfume. When you go back to the box you might give it to Leni Luneska. Maybe it belongs to her. At least it's got her monogram in the corner."

Cavanaugh's face did not change expression. "Thanks, Mulrooney," he said politely.

"Don't mention it, Lucky," replied the detective. "You seem to be Lucky by name and Lucky by nature. Well, its a great old world, ain't it? Romance and everything. There's only one thing that bothers me though—"

"You shouldn't let anything bother you," Cavanaugh remarked.

"I don't usually," Tom Mulrooney told him. "But when people use jimmies on other folks property it worries me just a little. If I find out anything more about that jimmy I'll let you know, Lucky."

"I'd appreciate it if you would," returned Lucky Cavanaugh courteously as he turned and went down the stairs, leaving Mulrooney standing where he was.

People are always moving about somewhere in a large theater during a performance—ushers, managers restless patrons.

Mulrooney and Cavanaugh, as they talked, had not been unobserved.

Three men dressed as ushers and carrying packages had emerged from a nearby office—had given quick glances at the detective and Lucky Cavanaugh, and then moved unhurriedly in the opposite direction.

Cavanaugh, as he made his way down to Leni's box, tried to dismiss Mulrooney from his mind. Nevertheless, he realized quite clearly that he was in a spot.

As soon as the robbery and murder came to light, Mulrooney would invariably remember Cavanaugh's wandering around near the scene. There was the matter of the jimmy, too. This was not, of course, evidence enough to connect him with the crimes but it might require some difficult explaining. Leni might become involved should Kruger's identity come out.

Walking down the side aisle with his carefree stride, Lucky Cavanaugh presented the nonchalant and unworried picture of a young man whose calm state of mind corresponded with his handsome dinner-coated appearance.

This was not the first time in his life that he had been in a tight place. Brushing shoulders with the police was not exactly a novelty. Yet he did not find it necessary to relax his easy politeness or his habitual smile of good-natured cynicism. This was the first time, however, when his affections were ever tied up with anything resembling danger. More than anything else, he was acutely conscious of an odd aching regard for Leni Luneska.

In some strange way it had come about that he was responsible for her happiness.

THE DAY IN SPORTS

LOVELOCK'S RECORD RUN HOW ABOUT 4 MIN. MILE? AND 9 SECOND CENTURY?

Here's the way the fastest miles ever run were paced by quarters:

J. E. Lovelock, 4:07.6.61.4 62.2 65.1 58.9

W. R. Bonthron, 4:08.7.61.2 62.3 65.1 160.

J. Ladoumegue, 4:09.2 — — — 61.2

G. Cunningham, 4:9.8.61 65.8 63. 60.

Gene Venzke, 4:10*...61.2 65.2 64.2 59.4

Paavo Nurmi, 4:10.4..58.6 64.9 63.7

Norman Taber, 4:12.6.58 67. 68. 59.6

J. P. Joones, 4:14.4...61.8 67.6 66.8 58.2

NOW THAT Jack Lovelock of Oxford and Dunedin, New Zealand has reeled off a mile in 4:07:6, thus two seconds from Jules Ladoumegue's world record, two old questions arise:

Can a human being run eight furlongs in 4 minutes and can a human being sprint 100 yards in 9 seconds?

The writer has always believed both feats possible and in this belief has the support of numerous coaches and runners.

Lovelock believes that were he and Bill Bonthron of Princeton to meet again under such perfect conditions as governed their last meeting either might do a 4.05 mile. Lovelock was quoted immediately after the race as saying that he believed a 4-minute mile possible although he himself might not be able to do it.

A four minute mile would mean that the runner would have to average 15 seconds for every 110 yards. In other words, he'd have to sprint for a mile. To get another slant at just how fast he'd have to travel, look at it this way: he'd have to make approximately the same speed as a champion high hurdler does in the 120 yard event.

LOOKED at in that light, the feat seems well nigh impossible and yet here we have Lovelock, a slim 133-pounder doing 4:07:6 so easily that he galloped another quarter mile just to unlimber!

Matt Geis, Princeton track coach, firmly believes that if Bonthron and Lovelock were to meet again under similar conditions, either would surely do a mile in at least 4:05.

"Lovelock," says Geis, "gets tremendous drive from the ball of his rear foot. His form is almost faultless, but he might get a trifle more from his arm action. He has the stuff to lower the mark he set and a still more powerful runner will one day lower his mark and we shall have a 4-minute miler."

In passing, the writer recalls that Paavo Nurmi, the great Finn, also said a 4-minute mile was not only possible but probable within a few years.

Covering the century in 9 seconds flat would seem the more difficult feat. Ralph Metcalfe, the big negro from Marquette university, has done 9.2 more than once and it may be that he will never be able to clip two-tenths off his record.

But it doesn't necessarily follow that no one ever will. Some sprinter, bigger than Metcalfe, with a longer stride, and with the necessary temperament, will surely come along to topple the mark. Such a sprinter would have to beat Metcalfes best only about two yards while nobody living may do it, it is more than likely some youngster of the next generation will turn the trick.

ST. MARY'S MAY PLAY STANFORD

Coast Rivals May Resume Gridiron Relation In 1934 Season

(By United Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29—Passing of Glen S. (Pop) Warner brought many changes in Stanford University football, but probably the greatest is the possibility of resumption of relations between Stanford and St. Mary's.

Talk of a 1933 meeting between two of the Pacific Coast's foremost football aggregations came to a head here when representatives of the colleges admitted they were considering a contest, described as a "football natural."

It appeared more likely the projected game would be played next year, or perhaps in 1935, for both schools have heavy schedules carrying into mid-December this year and also are booked almost solidly for 1934.

St. Mary's, Oakland school that came swiftly to the front in football under Coach "Slip" Madigan, wants an agreement covering a six-year period, it is understood. Stanford was reported willing to play one game and then consider extending the series.

The teams met last in 1927, when the Galloping Gaels handed one of Warner's mightiest elevens a 16-0 pasting. That was no game for powder-puff players. At times it got out of the hands of the official. Feeling ran high as the Saints made their big bid for a place in the gridiron sun and won at the expense of their proud opponents.

Thereafter the game was dropped from the Stanford schedule. Insiders heard Warner was opposed to playing the Gaels again and that there would be no meeting between the two so long as he ruled.

But now Warner is in the East, beginning a coaching engagement at Temple University, and his successor here, Claude E. (Tiny) Thornhill, is reported "no averse to playing St. Mary's."

Coast fans would like the game played this season, but most likely they'll have to wait until next year, or the one following.

Lewis Smith Named Director At Niles

NILES, July 29—Lewis Smith, for the last two years head basketball coach, has been named athletic director of Niles high school, a member of the Northeastern Ohio Big Ten High School league.

He will fill the vacancy created by the promotion of his brother, Olin B. Smith, to the principalship of the high school.

For three years, Smith has served as assistant to his brother, but for the last two years had been head basketball coach. Walter N. Hilbedel who has been coach at Washington junior high school will take Lewis' place as assistant coach.

Lewis Smith is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and played on the football team for three years. He was a member of the eleven which trimmed Notre Dame 22 to 6 in 1928.

METHODISTS WIN OVER CHRISTIAN COMBINE, 8 TO 7

St. Paul's Club Misses Chance to Gain Ground In Church League

St. Paul's Columbians missed out on a good chance to advance in the fight for the church league softball championship as the First Friends combine showed great strength at bat in closing innings to hold the champions to a 9-9 tie in a thrilling tilt at Centennial park last evening.

Trinity Lutherans Lead

The Columbians, winners of the first half title, therefore continue in third place, a full game behind the Presbyterians and Baptists who are tied for second, and a game and a half behind the Trinity Lutherans who are leading the circuit.

The Friends paced the Columbians to a 5-0 lead in the first two innings but, after tallying four times themselves in the third, came through to take the lead with telling rallies in the sixth and seventh frames. The St. Paul's combine, however, staged a spurt of its own in the last of the finale to even the score.

It was too dark to play extra innings.

Christians Lose Again

First Christian church tossers set some kind of a record for softball league competition as they lost what is reported to be the nineteenth consecutive game yesterday. Their conquerors were the Methodists who won by an 8-7 score.

The losers rallied in the seventh to score five runs but fell one short of forcing the battle into extra innings.

Shaffer Markets Beat Laird Team

Tallying six runs in the sixth inning then ten more in the eighth, the Shaffer Markets defeated the Laird Juniors, 25-12, in a hard hitting tussle here Friday.

Both teams connected for 21 hits but two homers by R. Shaffer and L. Catlos which accounted for seven runs, were big factors in the Market's victory.

Jesse Owens May Enter Ohio State

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, July 29 — Jesse Owens, who ran the 100-yards in time no man has beaten, announced he had applied for admission at Ohio State university.

No fewer than 28 colleges and universities, through friends and alumni groups, tried to persuade the young negro that his athletic future lay in their direction.

At the national interscholastic meet in Chicago recently, Owens smashed three world's scholastic records beside tieing the world 100-yard record 9.4 seconds. He is the current A. A. U. broad jump champion.

Al Simmons Takes Lead In American Over Jimmie Foxx

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 29 — Chuck Klein maintained his grip on first place in the race for National league batting honors during the last week but Jimmie Foxx yielded the American league lead to his one-time teammate, Al Simmons.

Klein, just held his .370 hitting pace as he made eight hits in 21 trips to the plate while Simmons brought his mark up a single point to .361 with eight hits in 22 attempts. In contrast, Foxx and Joe Cronin, who was tied with Seimmons for second place a week ago, gathered five hits each, in 25 times up. Foxx lost 13 points and Cronin ten.

Spud Davis, Klein's Philadelphia teammate, dropped five points further behind Klein to .343 while Chick Fullis, gained four for a .337 mark and third place.

The gains and losses among the other major league hitting leaders were limited to a few points with two Boston players turning in the outstanding feats. Wally Berger of the Braves rapped out 12 hits in 24 times at bat to add 12 points to his mark while Roy Johnson climbed into the American league's "first ten" with an eight point gain.

Berger also tied Klein for the National league home run lead by clouting his 18th four bagger.

Advance of Sports In Chicago Gives City High Ranking

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO, July 2[illegible]. — This city's place in the world sport spotlight bids fair to offset the notoriety brought it by gang warfares.

While Chicago may continue for awhile to rate as second to New York in the point of population, its attraction has a world sport center, second to none, is rapidly progressing.

Already holding the title of "World's Greatest" as far as railroads, aviation and grain are concerned, legislation recently enacted by the state legislature has paved the way to make Chicago an attraction for championship prize fighting and horse racing fans.

Boxing Aided

The legislation liberalized existing boxing laws to the point that the State Athletic Commission is authorized to allow 15 round bouts in place of 10 if the principals involved rate being in a 15 round bout.

Previously the law was that the commission could allow a bout involving the heavyweight championship only, other bouts being limited to ten rounds.

Now any bout that the commission thinks is of enough importance to draw visitors to Chicago, where all big fights within the state are held, it may authorize the bout to go 15 rounds.

It long has been contended by sporting authorities that a ten round limit on heavyweight bouts does not give the contestants ample time in which to show their true prowess. The claim is that heavyweight fighters can stand the punishment over the ten round route, but the 15 round limit really gives one of the contestants an opportunity to show superiority.

Drastic Powers

In addition, the commission also is given drastic powers to take the "hokum" out of fake wrestling bouts to the point that it sets the conditions under which every wrestling match is held.

The law giving the state control of horse racing was for the purpose of giving more legal standing to the sport of kings and consisted in creating a State Horse Racing Commission, who shall distate everything pertaining to horse racing, excepting as to the financial end. The commission will dominate the running of the race.

The commission, while not having power to determine what the state shall receive in the amount of taxation from horse racing, however, will have something to say in observing the conduct of wagering at the track and will observe and safeguard the interests of both the state and bettor.

It will have the same control over horse racing that the boxing commission has over the prize ring.

Vetoed Dog Racing

Although the legislature acted to legalize dog race betting, the proposal failed of being enacted into law because of an executive veto by Gov. Henry Horner, who rejected the measure in that he said the sport was a "lottery," detriment to society and a "lure" to working people.

He separated dog racing from horse racing by declaring that dog racing did not involve human intelligence, pointing out that a horse has the guidance of a jockey to "urge" it on to do its best.

Englnd Favored To Win Davis Cup

AUTEUIL, France, July 29—England stood on the threshold of Davis cup triumph today for the first time since 1912.

Her newest tennis aces, Fred Perry and H. W. (Bunny) Austin, carrying on where J. C. Parke and C. P. Dixon left off 20 years ago, routed Henri Cochet and Andre Merlin in the opening singles matches of the challenge round yesterday and needed only one more victory to clinch the series and dethrone France as the cup-holder after six years.

In the same brilliant form they flashed against the United States in the interzone finals a week ago, Austin mowed down young Merlin, 6-3, 6-4, 6-0, while Perry outlasted Cochet, once the undisputed king of world tennis, 8-10, 6-4, 8-6, 3-6, 6-1 to give England an all but insurmountable lead.

With three matches to go and only one victory needed, it seemed impossible that England could be defeated. Perry was accounted a sure winner over Merlin in singles tomorrow and, if that victory materializes, a French victory in the doubles today and a possible triumph for Cochet over Austin tomorrow, would not affect the final results.

Colorado Has New Basketball Coach

(By International News Service)

BOULDER, Colo., July 29—The Rocky Mountain region looks to Henry P. Iba, new coach of the University of Colorado to revolutionize basketball in this section.

The 28-year old maker of champions builds his system on block plays evolved from the old pro game. Perfect timing and flawless execution and possession of the ball are all important in his system. Sharpshooting forwards who are weak defensively have no place on his team.

Val Picinich, recently released by Brooklyn, was the only major league catcher ever to catch three no-hit games. He caught no-hit, no-run games hurled by Bullet Joe Bush, Athletics, against Cleveland, Aug. 26, 1916; Walter Johnson, Senators, against Boston July 1, 1920, and Howard Ehmke, Red Sox, against Philadelphia, Sept. 7, 1923.

Phillies Strong On Home Field; Trounce Braves

(By Associated Press)

Following a time honored custom, the Phillies again have hung out storm warnings for teams which invade Baker bowl in the latter part of the National league season.

A team of slugging specialists who find the small Philadelphia park just to their liking, the Phils have demonstrated time and again that they are a match for the strongest club on their home grounds. They proved that point yesterday as they hammered the Boston Braves into submission 13-12, in 10 innings.

For the Phils, the victory served to give them a one game margin over Cincinnati in the struggle for sixth place while the Braves dropped 2½ games behind the fourth place in the American with a 7 to 2 victory over the Tigers.

Oral Hildebrand gave only eight hits as he pitched his first full game in more than three weeks, and the Indians never were headed after Earl Averill socked a triple with two on base in the first inning and scored a third run on O'Del Hale's single.

BUYING, SELLING MINDS
THE RECOVERY DRIVE

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1933 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

OUR BUYING and selling minds seem not even to know what they think is going to happen here or in Europe. One day they buy, next day they sell. The dollar goes down, Europe says it is unsound. Then it goes up, and European moneys drop.

Europe said, "Leaving the gold basis, America will flood the world with cheap dollars." Now Europe discovers that we have fewer dollars in circulation, by nearly 40,000,000, than we had on the gold basis.

THOUSANDS of letters from the President, suggesting wider employment of labor, were received "cheerfully" by employers. In two boroughs of Greater New York alone Manhattan and the Bronx, 300,000 letters, marked "The White House, Official Business," were distributed, one to every employer of three or more persons."

In reply to White House letters, employers, of whom there are 1,500,000 in the New York area alone, are expected to pledge themselves to President Roosevelt's plan to increase employment and restore

There will be a follow-up system, to make sure that employers making pledges and displaying the government insignia if the blue eagle do not forget their promises.

UNION LABOR organizations may present a problem for the President's consideration, asserting their right to overrule codes and other arrangements made by the government. Already the silk workers' union has called a strike of 70,000 workers, saying it wants and will accept no textile code.

It is not probable, however, that any private organization will take precedence of the government, in authority.

A fight with an individual employer is, in many ways, unlike a quarrel with the government.

THE BAND BOX

Latest notes from Dancelaud and the parks.

Allen Reynolds post No. 892, Veterans of Foreign Wars, holds the grand opening of its "Night Club" at the V. F. W. home, Vine ave, at 8:30 tonight.

Plenty of entertainment is being planned in the form of music and dancing.

Something is planned each night of the week except Sunday at the "night club," vets announce.

Cab Calloway will soon be heard at the Idora park dance hall.

Dancing to Jim Dimmick's band continues as the ball room attraction at Craig's Beach.

One of Ohio's most youthful orchestral vocalists is Don Dunham, member of the Dimmick orchestra. Only 18 years old, Dunham is reported recently to have turned down an offer from Isham Jones to remain with the Dimmicks troupe.

Dimmick's orchestra is directed by Bob McCullough, former member of Dick Fiddler's orchestra.

Old fashioned square and round dances will be held at the ballroom Tuesday night while every Wednesday night is "Vaudeville Night." Billie Hannay, Salem's "junior Eddie Cantor," has been invited to participate in next weeks program, Platt reported.

An unusual program of free entertainment is scheduled Sunday at Craig Beach park, Lewis Platt announced today. The Ohio Leather Co. band of Girard will play in two concerts at 4:30 and 7:30 while free talking pictures will be another feature.

The "All America Fliers," thrilling circus act, will perform in the midway.

Stan Stanley and his noted orchestra will appear at Idora park tonight. Stanley's is the first of a series of noted bands scheduled to play at the Youngstown ballroom, Manager Eddie Gilronan reports.

Mrs. Henry Lundberg was awarded the grand prize at the entertainment held at the V. F. W. home last night. The fish fry next Tuesday night is expected by committeemen to attract a large crowd. There will also be music.

Patsy's Melodiers of Alliance will play at tonight's event. The public is invited.

Stars of Stage, Radio, Screen Appear In "College Humor", Here Three Days

THEATER audiences will find plenty of variety and spice in their movie menu this coming week at the State theater. . . .Mystery, romance, laughs, college fun, western thrills and what not go to make up an attractive schedule of entertainment. . . .

"College Humor" Here

On Sunday Monday and Tuesday (this is going back to the former way of billing a film here for the first three days of the week) comes what is called one of the snappiest and best worked out musicals of the year—"College Humor". . . There's a grand cast—take a glance at these names—Bing Crosby, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie, Mary Carlisle, Mary Kormann, Lona Andre, Jimmy Conlin, Eddie Nugent, and the Ox Road co-eds . . .

Dances, songs, an amusing plot, lots of laughs and gags—surely this picture should be a remedy for any blues we might still have . . .

Wednesday's Film

"The Silver Cord", story of selfish mother love comes to the theater to play Wednesday only . . . In the cast are Irene Dunne, Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Laura Hope Crews and Eric Linden—an excellent one to be sure . . .Reviews state the film belongs to Miss Crew and Miss Dee—the former you will remember for her comic work in "I Loved You Wednesday" with Elissa Landi and as Slim Summerville's mother in "They Had to Get Married", she is said to be wonderful in a most unsympathetic role in this her latest film . .

For Thursday at the State we have "Supernatural", a mystery yarn featuring Carole Lombard and Randolph Scott with supporting roles being handled by H. B. Warner and Vivienne Osborne . . .

Wierd Plot

This is a film of spiritualism—it has a peculiar and rather fascinating plot . . . A brass trumpet thrown casually on a table begins to play and utter words apparently from spirits, a table floats, spirit messages are written mysteriously on a slate, spirit rappings are heard and numerous other strange and wierd happenings occur . . . The picture shows the audience exactly how all this is done by a "phoney" spiritualist . . .

Friday ushers in the weekly double bill and we have "Professional Sweetheart" starring Ginger Rogers who has this year become one of the most popular of the younger actresses, and Norman Foster and the western "Crossfire" featuring Tom Keene . . .

Good Bill

Ginger as a radio celebrity who becomes the country lad's wife leads him a merry chase until the worm turns—then Foster (remember him as the country boy in "State Fair"?) takes her away to his log cabin in Kentucky where he teaches her to say dear" and darling when she refers to him instead of "it" as she had been doing . . .

Gregory Ratoff, Zasu Pitts, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins and Lucien Littlefield enact leading supporting roles . . .

Betty Furness is Keene's leading lady in "Cross Fire" that combines a murder mystery, an unjust branding of a hero as a fool, and a really exciting plot to provide plenty of thrills for adventure fans . . .

Chorus To Sing

A young women's chorus of Salem singers, directed by Lamoine Derr, will sing two selections Sunday morning at the Baptist church.

One of their numbers, "Supplication" is a composition of Derr's, both words and music. Words of the other number, "Sweet and Low" were composed by Tennyson, and the music by Wilson.

The chorus is comprised of Ethel Shears, Naomi Shinn, Rachel Cope, Anna Mae Painter, Mrs. Perce King, Nellie Naragon, Kathryn Taylor, Alice Jones, Mrs. Charles Wilhelm, Ada Lottman. Homer S. Taylor is the accompanist.

Following the service Rev. A. C. Westphal, pastor of the church, and Rev. H. R. Bunch, Leavittsburg, O., who is holding tent meetings here, will baptize a number of candidates.

Enroll At Mount

Miss Selma May Liebsehner, of Salem, and Eugene W. Failor, of Sebring are among the students who have recently enrolled in the freshman class at Mt. Union college, Alliance.

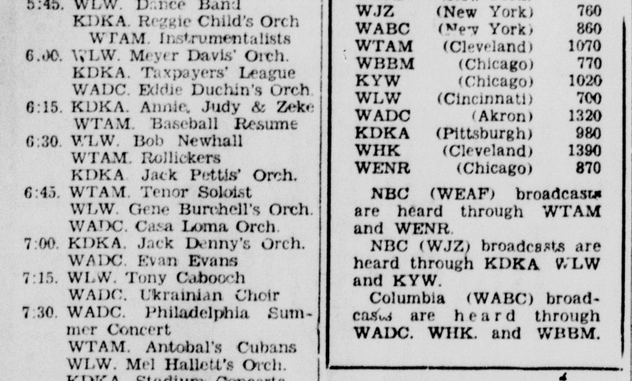

WORCESTER, Mass.—A bolt of lightning resulted indirectly in the restoration to Miss Madolyn M. Larkin of a string of rosary beads she lost two years ago. When lightning struck the Larkin home, the young woman's name appeared in a local newspaper. The cashier of a theater in which the beads had been found connected the name engraved on the beads with the name in the paper, and restored the beads to their owner.
